Tia Palmer died. Twice.

But this still isn't enough to make her believe in miracles, to make her believe in God. After the death of her father as a child, and her mother's subsequent remarriage to Rod, a fast food worker, Tia's mind begins to fracture. Soon her "imaginary friend" blossoms into a full fledged psychotic break. Now on anti-psychotic medication, Tia's relationship with her mother deteriorates. After her first near-death experience, Tia changes schools and meets Talia with whom she forms a seemingly unbreakable bond. But when trouble with Talia surfaces, and church boy Nathan becomes Tia's boyfriend, her life heads down a path she could never have imagined leading to her second death. All We Know of Heaven follows Tia on her path to faith, family happiness, and personal redemption. While dealing with tragedy and her own mental illness, she learns the hard way that living isn't simply about surviving. And survival is never a guarantee.
