Excerpt from History of New London: Connecticut; From the First Survey of the Coast in 1612 to 1860; With a Memoir of the Author

Frances Manwaring, daughter of Joshua and Fanny (Manwaring) Caulkins, was born in New London, Conn., April 26, 1795, and died there February 3, 1869. Her ancestry, on the paternal side, can be traced to the early settlers of the vicinity of Plymouth.

Mr. Richard Blinman, minister in Chepstow, Monmouthshire, England, having been silenced for non-conformity to the established church, immigrated to this country, and is supposed to have arrived at Plymouth in the autumn of 1640. He was accompanied in his voluntary exile by several members of his church, with their families, and all taken together were styled the "Welch party." Monmouth shire borders upon Wales, and probably most of them were of Welch origin, but English appears to have been their native language. The exact time of their arrival is not known, but a part of them, including Mr. Blinman and Hugh Cauken, were propounded for freemanship at Plymouth, March 2, 1640; which was too early for any immigrant vessel to have arrived that year.

In the first New England record the family name is written as above, Cauken, and it may be interesting to notice here the changes which have taken place in the spelling of this surname, since it first appears in the old country. It has been heretofore stated by a writer in the pages of the Register, that the original name was probably Colkin. William Colkin lived in King John's reign, 1199-1216, and founded a hospital in Canterbury, which bore his name.
